G. Richard Thompson is a Professor of Economics at Clemson University. He joined the Clemson faculty in 1982 as Assistant Dean of the College of Business and Professor of Economics. Prior to moving to Clemson, Professor Thompson served on the faculty at the University of Central Florida and the University of South Alabama.

Dr. Thompson received his undergraduate degree in economics from the University of South Florida and his Ph.D. in economics from the University of Virginia. He has been a Visiting Professor at Arizona State University and a Visiting Lecturer at Ecole Superieure de Commerce de Pau (France).

He has served as a consultant to federal and state government agencies and to private businesses. He has acted as an expert witness in numerous court cases involving economic damages. Professor Thompson’s research interests are the economics of tort liability.